He will have out Geddes, 2:28 1-3, and other fast ones. Splan, the only Splan, the wit of the turf, and one of the ablest reliasmen yet seen, drove me over the farm, and pointed out the different broodmares, a rare collection, viewed in any light, high-chaef as individuals and from recation-reducing families. Among them I light, high-class as individuals and from great*producing families. Among them I recall: Berkshire Belle, by Aleyone, dam Belle Brasfield; Triussella, by Dictator, dam Molite Triussell, alpha Russell, by Manibrino Russell, dam Alley, dam of Wilton; Chiquerita, 2:16 3-4, Evemere, by Dictator, dam Joy, dam of Waco, 2:16 1-4; Magnie Sherman, 2:13 1-4; Lee Tell, 2:23 1-4, by Axtell, 2:12, dam Amy Lee, 2:14; Helpmate, by Wedgewood, dam Lady Foxie, 2:24 1-2; Ethel Baron, full sister to Bumps, 2:09 1-4, by Baron Wilkes, and Olive Leaf, by Alle Wilkes, dam Anglia, sister to Patchen

Six miles out from Lexington is Bryant Station Furm, the home of Major P. P. Johnston, who breeds both thoroughbreds and trotters. Major Johnston is one of the best-known men in the State, for a number of terms he perved as president of the Kentucky Trotting-Horse-Breeders' Association, and, with the assistance of Mr. Ed. A. Totton, as secretary, raised that organization to the highest degree of prespective. As president of the National Trotting Association, much of the Major's time is occupied; still affairs are prosperous at the farm. With soo acres of choice land, well watered by the North Eikhorn river, there is an abundance of pasturage for the herds of Shetland ponics. REAL ESTATE MOVEMENT. The long list of deeds of bargain and sale made matter of record in the county clerk's office during the past week gives the most satisfactory evidence that money is easier, that there is a slow but sure, steady renewal of confidence, and that times, on the whole, are improving. The prices paid for property are satisfactory, and there is every indication that a business activity is on the top of a wave of prosperity not far distant.

STORY-TELLER'S POWER.

JUDGE FLOURNOY MADE A CON-

Solomon Marable, With the Words of Doom Ringing in His Ears, Could Not Resist the Best Story.

Any person who can make a man who has just been sentenced to death laugh must be a pretty fair anecdote-teller. So far as is known, there is only one far as is known, there is only one such case on record, and it took place at Farmville a few days since.

Solomon Marable had, just been condemned to be hung July 3d, by Judge Crute, and after hearing his sentence was sitting in the court-room waiting to be taken back to jull. As he sat there, with a dreary expression on his face, Judge Flournoy began to relate to several friends an account of a scene between Col. Marye and the jailer of Norfolk city. The story, told in the Judge's inmittable style, was so irresistibly funsy that Solomon joined heartily in the general laugh that followed the denoument of the anecdote.

THE REST STORY.

Probably the story that created the greatest merriment of any of the many told by Judge Flournoy during his stay greatest inerriment of any of the many told by Judge Flournoy during his stay in Farmville, was the following:

A plous old Methodist minister had an engagement to preach one Sunday at a church where there had been no sermon for a long time. He spent Saturday night with a friend about five miles from the church, and arising early the next morning got on his horse and rode over. All along the way he was shocked to find people at work just as though it was a week-day. Farmers were tilling their fields, the cross-roads grocery was open, and people buying goods, a blacksmith was shoeing a horse, and in the church-yard, in the very shadow of the sacred edifice, a gang of godless boys were engaged in a game of marbles.

The old minister alighted from his horse and entered the church with a sad countenance, ruminating upon the wicked ways of that part of the world. He found about six persons waiting to hear him preach. Slowly ascending the pulpit be thus addressed them:

BLASPHEMER AND LIAR.

"My brethren, I am grieved beyond measure at the state of things existing among you, on every hand as I came over I saw people pursuing their avocations as though It were not the Lord's holy day of rest.

people pursuing their avocations as though it were not the Lord's holy day of rest Farmers were ploughing, blacksmiths shoeing horses, merchants selling goods, and right in the church-yard boys playing maryles.

The minister paused a moment, looked around the room to give effect to his words, and said impressively: words, and said impressively:
"And as I came up the steps I saw one long, lean, slab-sided fellow, with a stomach no bigger than the paim of my hand, shoot a marble and say: There, be God, I'm fat." He was a-blasphening of the Lord, and a telling of a lie in the same breath."

Good Templars.

There is considerable activity in the city among the lodges of Good Templars. All have elected and installed officers for the quarter. Some new departures have been made by the various lodges, that it been made by the various lodges, that it is hoped will prove interesting to members and increase the number and attndance. The meeting Monday night at Rescue Lodge proved very interesting. The following were the officers installed by L. D. E. M. Redford, assisted by Joseph H. Shepherd and H. M. Trimble: Past C. T. Theo. Roschen: Chief Templar, R. C. Traylor; Vice-Templar, Mrs. M. J. Quesenberry; Secretary, Asa Johnson; Financial Secretary, E. M.
